Teaching Experience

Adjunct Instructor

Community College of Baltimore County – Baltimore, MD

Fall 2021 – Present

DIGM 111: Media Literacy and Visual Communications - Investigates the pervasiveness of media and how it may shape, influence and alter ones perception of reality.

DIGM 112: Fundamentals of Media Production - Surveys production workflows and identifies the roles and responsibilities of individuals involved in a digital media production.

DIGM 152: Digital Filmmaking - Prepares students to be able to create a narrative story using digital media production techniques. Students perform all stages involved in the digital filmmaking process.

Graduate Teaching Internship (GTI)
Maryland Institute College of Art - Baltimore, MD
Fall 2019 – May 2021

Moving Image I – An intermediate video production course covering history, theory and techniques: I accompanied lectures with hands-on equipment instruction, software tutorials and helped lead discussions of student work.

Haptics and Optics – An entry-level course that introduced various mediums: I provided a lesson that bridged the gap between audio and video production to make a cohesive piece; file organization was emphasized as well as experimentation.

Moving Image II – Further technical instruction on various camera/lighting equipment workflows while helping develop deeper knowledge of aesthetic theory and practical expertise:

I helped guide various lighting workshops and demos, as well as proctoring in-class critiques.

Advanced Editing and Post Production – A higher-level video production course that covered technical information and aesthetic techniques/theories for editing films:

I had the opportunity to propose, produce, and help teach a lesson on lighting, green screen, and masking techniques for experimental in-class demonstrations. I also helped lead class discussions.

Special Effects – A post-production course that specialized in techniques used in Adobe After Effects:

I was responsible for helping the class through aiding in technical support during and after sessions.

Advanced Cinematography and Lighting – A graduate-level filmmaking course that specialized in on-site lighting, some history/critical theory, and distinct attention to cinema-level camera equipment:

I led discussions and lesson plans. I was also one-on-one with students helping with their final projects.

Alternative Processes in Video – A higher-level video production course that focused on video's use in art gallery spaces as a form of installation:

I would aid in discussions surrounding the video art canon, the history of the medium, it's current artists, and it's future applications. I would hold technical workshops after class pertaining to these techniques) and met with students one-on-one. I also presented my MFA thesis project to the class.
